Cat Mahoney is a Derby Fellow in Media and Communication at the University of Liverpool. Her research focuses on the relationship between media, memory and the past and specifically the representation of gendered histories on television. Her book Women in Neoliberal Postfeminist Television Drama: Representing Gendered Experiences of the Second World War, was published in 2019 by Palgrave Macmillan.