Distinction Between Workshops and Roundtables

Workshops (revised)

- Interactive discussions led by one or two facilitators that emphasize participation by all session attendees;
- Typically focus on professional development, pedagogical issues, institutional issues, disciplinary and administrative issues.
- There may be a workshop on a scholarly topic but it must make clear how it will involve participants beyond discussion.

Roundtables (new)

- Discussion sessions with four or five speakers who speak for no more than 5 minutes each and then participate in a discussion led by a facilitator;
- Typically focus on scholarly topics;
- Must allow time for discussion.
- There may be a roundtable on a professional/pedagogical issue: it is more a question of format than topic.
